How to use OEKO-TEX® CERTIFICATES in sales and marketing materials

How to use OEKO-TEX® correctly

OEKO-TEX® is an internationally recognised certification scheme and a guarantee that a product has been checked for harmful chemicals and dyes. Only products that comply with the requirements set out in OEKO-TEX® Standard 100 are authorised to carry the label.

OEKO-TEX® is a registered trademark, which means there are rules for where and how the logo can be used in your marketing.

If you are a retailer of at least one ID® Identity product that is OEKO-TEX®-certified, you can use the OEKO-TEX® logos in your marketing in printed materials and on digital platforms, including your website and social media, but only if you comply with the guidelines for the use of OEKO-TEX®.

OVERVIEW OF OEKO-TEX® STANDARD 100 ANS ORGANIC PRODUCT LOGOS

OEKO-TEX® certificates have product logos with different certificate numbers and are split into classes and annexes. Class 1 has more requirements than class 2, which is why class 2 appears at the top of the list below:
